PROVERB BY DEBS—Look not upon the cucumber when it is green

CHICAGO will presently go ahead of New York, but its population will be largely of the fiat kind.

"THE NAVY is peace," says the kaiser, evidently forgetting that the remark originated in Harlem.

AN AUTHORITY insists that no kind of shark is dangerous to human life. Very well; you try it—we're busy.

"I FIND no inconvenience," says a lady, "in riding a wheel with a long skirt." Dear madam, that is not the question.

JOSEPH COOK is going around the world with his lectures, and there are people even in Boston who hope he will make a permanent stop when he reaches half the distance.

MR. WHITNEY says, "If the silver men carry the next national Democratic convention it will split the party in two." Yes, indeed; and if they don't carry it, too, Mr. Whitney.

AS WE have said, Mr. Bunnell of the Dansville Advertiser is very thin. Sometimes when he looks around for himself he finds that he has inadvertently gone away.

IT IS URGED that ladies must not ride the bicycle because it is ridden by women of bad character. Very well; ladies must not eat, drink or sleep, because those things are done by bad women too.

THE EDITOR of the Chicago Times-Herald wants every ex-president to get twenty-five thousand dollars a year. Well now, wouldn't it be cheaper and more generous to elect our presidents for life?

MR. MOODY told a Buffalo reporter that Jonah was swallowed by a whale. We do not wish to question Mr. Moody's veracity, but is it not remarkable that this curious fact has not got into print before?

THE LADY of Montana who ran for attorney-general, was defeated and married her successful competitor, is triumphant in her defeat, for, behold you, the man will do the work and she will have most of the salary.

WASTED ADMIRATION.

WOMAN (snappishly)—"Well, what do you want?"

HANDSOME HARRY (sweetly, almost piously)—"Ah, mum I stopped ter admire dat remarkable child uv yours. If I ever seen a perfect picter uv Napoleon Bonyparte in his prime it's dat kid—same shaped head, same nose, eyes an' mout'. De only difference is, de kid's glance is a trifle more piercin' dan Bony's wuz."

WOMAN—"I never saw that boy before in my life. If you don't move on I'll unchain my bull-dog."

THE DUTY OF DEBT-PAYING.

SPAIN has owed us twenty million dollars for nine years, and the government wants the money. To seize Havana and collect her customs is on the whole such a reasonable thing to do that we regret having objected to it in the case of the English at Corinto. As has been remarked, it is a small person who isn't ready to confess his mistakes; and things do change so rapidly at this end of the century.

OUR AFFECTIONATE TRIBUTE.

THE GIRL GRADUATE knows a great deal whether she knows anything or not. Her first duty is to be pretty, and it is always attended to. If she has had time to perfect herself in other respects, well and good; if not, still and forever well and good. A pretty girl is in herself an education, and whatever she thinks or says or writes is right whether it is right or not Oh, let us cherish that part of our educational system which gives us the pretty graduate.

THE CHURCH AND THE BLOOMERS.

SOME CLERGYMEN are as pronounced in favor of bloomers and the bicycle as Bishops Coxe and Doane are pronounced against them. That shows that there are two sides to the question, notwithstanding the sweeping assumption of the bishops that there is only the one which belongs to them. Then, too, there is a possibility that women know how to dress and conduct themselves without the aid or the commands of the other sex, church or no church.

THE LAW AND THE JUROR.

LET THE JUROR be paid a fair price for his services. He is as much entitled to it as judges and lawyers. And why should men be obliged to serve if thereby their business, their health and their patience suffer? What right has the law to a tyranny that belongs to no other institution? Let us repeat the question, why not professional jurors? Let men be educated to that business, and let them be paid for it. The law takes to itself an authority as imperative as that of the czar. It has no business to outrage the liberty of the citizen in that way.

THE INSULTS OF THE COURT-ROOM.

THE NAGGING of witnesses by lawyers is amusing to the nagger and the court audience, but is it not amazing that the court should allow it to go to extremes? Is a man necessarily a fool or a scoundrel because he has to occupy the chair? Would any lawyer dare to insult a witness outside as he does inside of the court-room? If a witness resents the impudence of these lawyers is he guilty of more contempt of court than the lawyers are? Some of those nagging, badgering professors of legal impertinence ought to have their noses squeezed and lengthened.

THE LION AS A WATCH-DOG.

A PET LION in a Bridgeport family tore off the breeches of a burglar, who was so frightened by the animal that he jumped through a window, taking the sash with him. At the opening of the rebellion Artemus Ward told of a southern town that proposed to confiscate a traveling circus. During the proceedings the animals got loose, and the last scene of the last confiscator showed him just ahead of a ferocious and rapid lion, with a white rag fluttering from his pantaloons. "I guess," said Artemus, speaking of the lion, "I guess they didn't confisticate him much."

THE GREAT PROBLEM.

A GRADUATE OF VASSAR discussed the labor question at great length The new woman evidently intends to devote herself largely to statesmanship; and if she can discover the proper legislation to secure the rights of both capital and labor she may take her place in legislature or congress without any material opposition. Men have failed to create the desired harmony, and the matter is a worse muddle than ever before. It looks simple. It may require ingenuity rather than breadth of thought. Let this woman succeed and heaven and the world will bless her three times a day world without end.

MY LADY'S SLEEVES.

SHE'S a phantom of grace as she sails in the room
And I long for a glimpse of her cheek;
But ecstasy dies in an ebony gloom—
My pangs are too utter to speak.
If my glances can roam to the crest of her comb
'Tis all that my vision perceives;
And so with a sigh
I lay the hope by
As I sit in the shade of her sleeves.

I once was a man of the average size,
In a beautiful bygone day;
And favor I found in my fair one's eyes,
And oh, but my bosom was gay!
But fashion hath changed and her heart is estranged,
In sorrow my spirit now grieves;
For my dream is a wreck,
And I'm shrunk to a speck
As I sit in the shade of her sleeves.

If I only could sport a silk hat in the house
How much it would add to my height!
But no; I must sit just as meek as a mouse,
Safe hid from my dear one's sight.
Why, sometimes I doubt if she knows I'm about.
Life truly is "nothing but leaves."
Pleasure's lamp has gone out
And hope put to rout
As I sit in the shade of her sleeves.

ENTIRELY TOO FRESH.

MR. SCOFFLEIGH — "I don't see why you people should be making such a fuss over the new woman. You don't hear us talking about the need of a new man."

MISS FIN DE SIÈCLE—"No. As a rule, men are new enough."

Ah, once I could glide to her radiant side
And coo in the shell of her ear;
With smiles and with blushes she'd listen in pride
My passionate wooing to hear.
Now at night and at noon through a rustling balloon
No answer my wooing receives;
Nor can my arm reach
To the goal of my speech
As I sit in the shade of her sleeves

Alas! as I viewed them swell up and up
My spirits sank down and down.
Oh, sometimes I think I must take to the cup,
My horrible anguish to drown.
Is it feathers or gas that hath puffed up my lass?
Weird fancies delirium weaves.
Whatever the stuff
My fate it is rough—
I'm lost in the shade of her sleeves!

SAMUEL MINTURN PECK.

A TIMELY RESOLUTION.

WHEREAS, we have observed the present tendency of women to assume the dress, habits and prerogatives of men, be it hereby

Resolved, that women shall hereafter be required, by the polite laws of general society, to remove the hat at public assemblies, to raise it in salutation, and to otherwise conduct themselves in accordance with the dignity and breeding of gentlemen.

JUDGE'S FAVORITES.

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER.

Thanks, Edna, for this portrait, caught
In pensive mood the while—
Though in your eyes the shade of thought
Has robbed us of a smile.
And yet, 'tis like you, grave or gay,
Because it's pretty, anyway.

BEAN AND BRAIN.

IT IS difficult for us to believe in the intellectual supremacy of Boston. The following, however, appears under a licensed victualer's sign in one of the back streets:

"Table doat and ale cart.
Regular dinner 25 ct.
Beans with 15 ct.
Beans without 10 ct.
Brains fried 10 ct.
" in batter 15 ct."

It would seem that either beans are too dear or brains too cheap. What sweet possibilities, too, are suggested by that mysterious "Beans with." But as for brains in batter, we have plenty of that in New York. MADELINE ORVIS.

DIDN'T INTEREST HER.

Boston girl — "I suppose you have read Kant?"

Chicago girl — "No; and I must say I have no inclination to if it's anything like 'Don't.'"

TO A LOVED WOMAN.

HAD I but spoken when first fields were green
And the young rose unveiled her velvet cheek
How better far for me it would have been,
Had I but spoken as a man should speak!

Had I but spoken in the face of fate
When you were fain to leave me—conquered pride
Saying "The price of parting is too great.
Sweet, I entreat you, tarry at my side."

Had I but spoken then and bid you stay
You would have yielded—ah, the chance was lost.
So now I stare, and swear in blank dismay,
Counting how much your summer outing cost.

MADELINE S. BRIDGES.

LOGICAL.

Petersbe (moralizing) — "Do you know, if you didn't smoke you would save about six hundred dollars every ten years?"

Smithington (thoughtfully) — "You don't smoke?"

Petersbe — "Certainly not! I haven't for twenty years."

Smithington — "Then I suppose you have got twelve hundred dollars to show for it?"

The particular moral—or joke—of this modern fable is that Petersbe was forced to admit that he hadn't saved a cent.

A WASTE OF TIME.

MRS. JOHNSON—"Goodness saikes, Mrs. Jackson! dis floor looks as ef it hadn' been swep' fo' aiges."

MRS. JACKSON—"Wa-al, I'll tell yo' how dat am, Mrs. Johnson; we're thinkin' ob movin' out nex' month."

EXTENUATION.

WE WERE fishing. Her hands
Were grasping the pole;
I saw my advantage—
A kiss from her stole.

She was highly indignant
And wept in her grief.
Quoted I, "The receiver 's
As bad as the thief." G. B.

BETTER DAYS.

Cawker — "Barlow made a rash prediction just now."

Cumso — "What did he say?"

Cawker — "He said that the time would come when it would be respectable to be honest."

THE DEVILINE WHISTLE.

"I bet Wilkins won't let me pass."

"I'll scare him with this whistle."

"Not a bad way, at all."

WAS HE RIGHT?

AFTER listening to the woman-suffrage advocate from Maine a Yankee shuffled uneasily up to her, murmuring, "I understand ye're a Maineac, an' hailin' from that state meself thought as"——but here he was interrupted. The woman from Maine deigned no reply; she coldly shook the extended hand and then shook him.

DUSTY RHODES—"Where wuz dat?"

WEARY IVES—"Philadelphia."

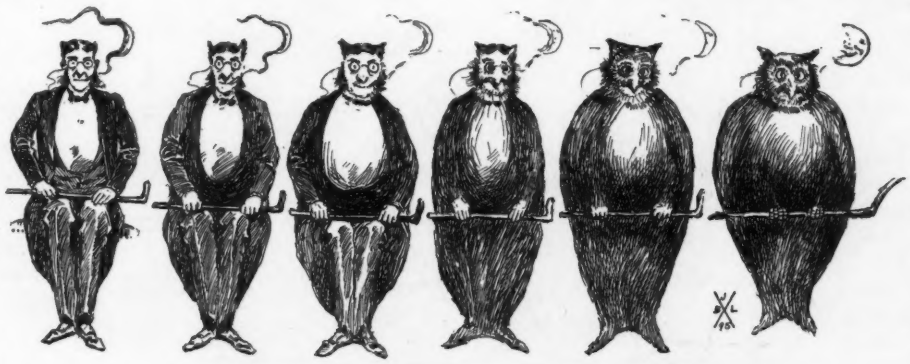
LE MISERABLE.

Judge—"Has the prisoner anything to say in his defense?"

Prisoner—"If you please, your honor, I was left an orphan at an early age and had no education to speak of. My mother died as far back as 'seventy."

Judge—"Your mother died in 'seventy, and you said you were twenty?"

Prisoner—"Your honor is right. Your honor may have guessed it—I was a posthumous child."



WHAT WILL BECOME OF THE MEN WHO STAY OUT LATE.

THE NEW DESIGNATION.

"WHERE are you from?"

"I'm from the Nutmeg state."

"I see—from the grater Connecticut."

IT IS far more necessary to make allowance for the experience of age than for the inexperience of youth.

A MISTAKE THAT WAS NOT RECTIFIED.

MR. NEWPLAYS—"Dere goes mah las' quartah, so I has toe call. Whad yo' got?"

MR. JACKSON (triumphantly)—"Fo' little two-spots."

MR. NEWPLAYS (disgustedly)—"Jes' mah dog-gone luck. All I has am fo' one-spots. Taik de coin, Mistah Jackson; dis am mah off night."

REVEREND MOAKLEY MCKOON ON BICYCLES.

"MAH frien's, let us regahd de bicycle as a type or symbol ob de human 'sperience.

"In de fust place regahd de mattah ob learnin' toe ride dat machine. Yo' got toe learn fo' yo'se'f shuah. Dere ain' no book ob instrucshuns gwine toe keep yo' frum barkin' yo' shins an' peelin' yo' nose while yo' is learnin'. Dat's jes' like wid de soul. Den yo' notice dat yo' got toe keep it balanced. Den dey all got a kit ob tools wid 'em in case dey break down, an' oh, mah po'r wo'ms, ain' yo' got patience, hope, charity an' faith in dat tool-bag ob yo'rn? Whad's dat 'ere roomatic tire, filled wid win', but pride, mah frien's? An' w'en dat tire gits busted an' de win' all let out yo' cums home on foot an' 'cross lots.

"Lasteenthly, obserbe de fact in a bicycle, mah melancholy microbes, dat de onliest way toe keep it straight is toe keep it goin', an' w'en yo' stops it tips ober. Is dere a lesson fo' us in dat? I should smile. W'en yo' stops yo' falls down. Keep a-movin'. De faster yo' go de straighter yo' go. An' now, mah corpulent coons, we cum toe de handle-bars. Dey controls de machine. Dat signifies faith. Sum o' yo', mah frien's, looks at life as a long hill, an' yo' puts yo' feet up an' goes coastin' toe de bottom. Bettah put down dem feet an' put on dem brakes.

THE FIN-DE-SIÈCLE BABE.

"Hello, baby! I see you."
"Well, show yer hand an' let's see wot yer got."

AGGRAVATING.

JACOB—"Grosser himmel! to dink dot I findt a tollar bill und den pe so fat dot I can't bick it up!"

TOO MUCH FOR HER.

Doctor—"How is the patient to-day?"

Nurse—"Not so well, doctor."

Doctor—"Has she been overdoing?"

Nurse—"I think so. She had me prop her up in bed so that she could write her weekly article on athletic exercises of frail women."

DOWN by the blue and shining sea
I took my bright-eyed baby-daughter.
She clapped her hands and squealed with glee,
"Oh, see ze great big soda-water!"

PRETENDED HE DIDN'T KNOW HOW.

"Makin' any money off er yer summer boarders?"
"Am I? Well, say! I'm lettin' every new boarder teach me how ter play poker."

TOO AWFUL.

PASTOR—"Yes, my dear friend; you have suffered a terrible affliction in the loss of your dear wife."

THE BEREAVED ONE—"Yes; but it isn't as bad as it might have been. She was going to commence wearing bloomers had she lived."

A BAD CASE.

"My husband never knows the difference, grammatically, between the first and third person."

"Oh, that's nothing. Mine never knows the difference between me and the servant-girl."

MARJORIE KNEW.

"JACK was dreadfully stupid in Sunday-school to-day, mamma," said Marjorie, rushing in like a junior hurricane. "Teacher asked who John the Baptist was and Jack said he was a forerunner. Then teacher asked what that was, and Jack just got red and looked at his feet 'cause he couldn't tell her—and she didn't ask me."

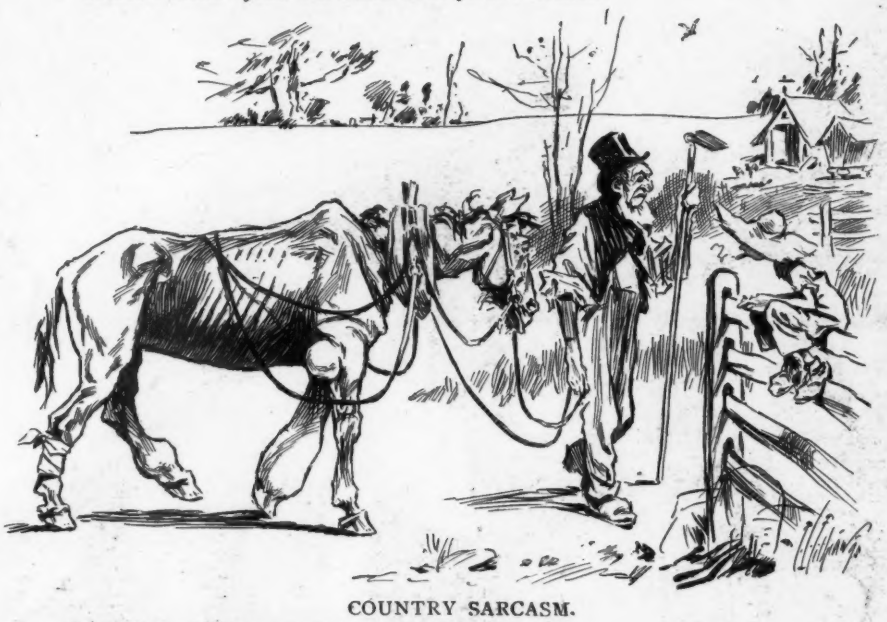
"Could you have answered, sweetheart?" asked her mother.

"Course I could. John was a man to do Jesus's errands."

BEHIND THE AGE.

MAMMA—"Are the boys nice here in the country Tommy?"

TOMMY (of New York)—"Nice? Not much. Why, they can't even swear."



COUNTRY SARCASM.

SMALL BOY—"Where yer goin' wid yer horse, deacon?"

DEACON—"What business is that o' yourn?"

SMALL BOY—"Nothin'; only I thought if yer was goin' ter enter him fer th' Derby I knowed a crazy man wot would like ter bet on him."

STRAY BREEZES.

A THORNLESS rose makes no deep impression.

Every one seconds the motion of the summer fan.

The Trilby craze has undergone a timely amputation.

Immersion is a popular summer doctrine of heated humanity.

The weather-prophet always discovers a tear in the robin's song.

It's an ultra good conscience that hasn't an elastic spot in it somewhere.

Even the righteous must have golden wings in this world to prove their upward tendencies.

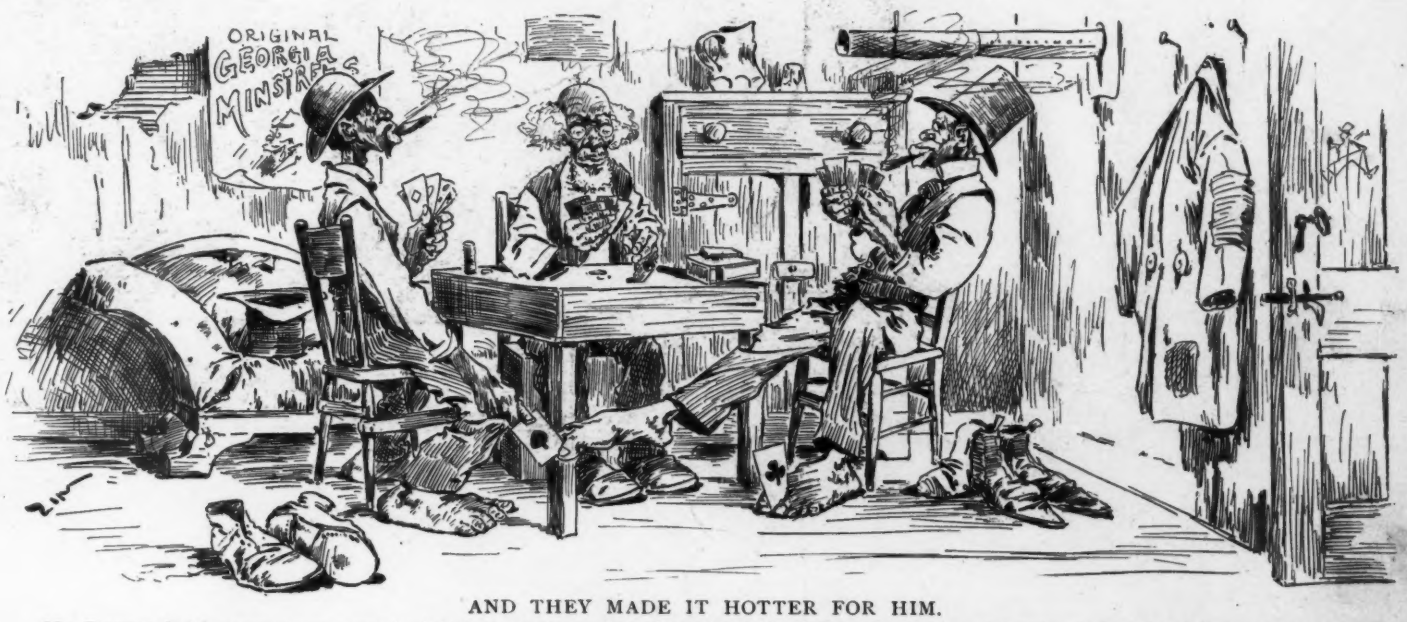
Modern architects should design a cheap cottage whose windows would not admit of Cupid's proverbial flight.

ANNIE M. TOOHEY.

TOO MODEST.

Charlie—"So you don't like my new straw hat?"

Mamie—"No, I don't. The ribbon around it has only five colors."



AND THEY MADE IT HOTTER FOR HIM.

MR. DEXTER (with a great-toe movement)—"It beats me how yo' kin play pokah wid yo' shoes on dis wa'm night, Mr. Marks. I kain't stan' de heat nohow—eh, Mr. Whackup?"

MR. WHACKUP (gripping the ace)—"De humidity am presperatin', Mr. Dextah. I raises yo' a dollah, Mr. Marks."

CHORUS (of indignant teachers)—"S-i-r!"

INCONSISTENCY.

MY ARM had but to touch her waist,
Regardless of intention,
To bring a blush upon her cheeks,
And looks which haunted me for weeks
Too numerous to mention.

But as I watch her in the surf
Thoughts through my brain are rushing
Old Ocean clasps her form so pure—
I wonder how she can endure
His embrace without blushing?

WILLIAM GERARD CHAPMAN, JR.

NOTHING IS LOST.

A DEAFENING crash followed the blast. Rocks flew helter-skelter, breaking a plate-glass window in the house opposite, where resided one of the tribe of Levi. The contractor at once appeared upon the scene of disaster, paid the damages and departed amid smothered exclamations of "Ishaac! Ishaac! Vot for you so slow? Shcrape up der proken pits there und shell 'em to der dhime-museum glass-eater!"

"A. P. A."

MY PARENTS never thought they'd give me trouble with my names
When they generously christened me Abijah Parker Ames!
They came of old New England stock and tilled New England ground,
And everything about the place had a good New England sound;
The love of country they esteemed the crown of their old days—
They didn't know some value it according as it pays;
And that is why in bitterness of heart I'm led to say
It's no one's fault if my initials spell out "A. P. A."

I do not mix in politics, and yet I registered
After a scene which puzzled me before I said a word.
For I stammer so I thought I'd write and give my name that way
Instead of stuttering it aloud—so I wrote "A. P. A"——
And then before I had a chance to finish "Ames" a poke
I got in the short ribs at which I thought they would have broke,
And a voice almost as brutal as that poke roared in mine ear,
"You blanketty, blanketty, blanketty, blanketty blank, get out of here!"

I did not know what I had done, or why I had been done—
I knew, however, I had best look out for number one,
And when I got a confidential clerkship I felt sure
My blundering initials could worry me no more!
My business letters put my lawyer bosses in a glee
Until they saw my signature, and then they fired me;
For every one of them was signed, as I recalled next day,
"McManus, Flynn & Rafferty, Attorneys—A. P. A!"

JOHN PAUL BOCOCK.

HIS ERRAND.

"WHERE'S the boss?" said a customer as he entered a Brooklyn barber-shop.

"He's gone over to New York to get his hair cut," was the reply.

——Whew! didn't expect such a shower as this.——

——Confound that stepping-stone.——

——What a lot of burrs!——

——Great Scott! he thinks I'm a tramp."

SUBURBS (next day)—"Well, when are you coming out to see me?"

Been Sick?

YOU and I have dreamed that we were trying to run away from something and our strength gave out at the critical moment, our legs refused to carry us, and when we tried to crawl on our hands and knees we always slipped back and commenced to fall, fall, fall. Nothing to save us! We grasped and clutched, the branch broke, the abyss yawned below us, and above, a star, like a ball of fire, came nearer and nearer. The weakness was horrible and the struggle for life so fearful that we awoke in the quiet peace of our room, caught our breath, and the sense of security, strength and will power came like heaven to a soul in torment.

The Convalescent

feels this sense of weakness, and the disease, which has left him wholly unable, without help, to fight his way back to perfect health and full recovery, seems like a fiend who jeers and points to the shattered constitution and broken-down spirits.

Nature unaided, like truth, may rise again, but

Pabst Malt Extract,
THE "BEST" TONIC

will set every spring of health in action, build up the battlements of the body by feeding and nourishing every fibre of the physical system, and send the rich blood through the veins.

Ah, but that is not all.

It will calm the mind and nerves, give you will power, destroy the frightful sense of weakness and dispel your fear. This is half the battle, and the wonderful strength-giving qualities of the Malt will fight the rest. Ask your physician if this is not true, and he will say "Yes" with emphasis.

"The result of the use of "Best" Tonic was eminently satisfactory. Although I found it adapted to all cases of debility, in the emaciation consequent upon protracted wasting diseases, in tardy convalescence and in the general debility of advanced age, it is indeed a tonic PAR EXCELLENCE."—R FRANK C.
